

BRITISH-FRENCH
BONDS SEVERED

ture is brushed aside and the deep feeling of all Frenchmen that the only hope for their country lies in the enforcement of the treaty in all its clauses meets with scant understanding or sympathy.

That Germany is being very badly treated, British and even French statesmen are inclined to agree. Germany must have raw materials and trade outlets if she is to pay her debts; she has not got them now.

If the German nation had a sense of humor, which it hasn't, a roar of laughter would go up at the suggestion of the British at this avowal of the need to help Germany from her two most formidable enemies, and at the practical suggestions by which England and France would assist the fallen fatherland to its feet.

"Certainly Germany must be helped, must have an outlet, must have raw materials," say the French.

"Let the English give up their stranglehold on the commerce of the world; let the Germans trade again; then we shall get our money sooner."

England has taken too much to Africa and round the Mediterranean; let Germany have some of her colonies back; let her even have a sphere of influence in Asia Minor, provided she will recognize the just claims of the British and French.

Vitamins

THIS is not a talk about reduction, this week though it should be of interest to the woman who wants to reduce as well as to the woman who wants to gain in weight.

The first thing to consider is—what is a vitamin?

I doubt whether I can give a brief definition. My big dictionary, published a few years ago, does not have it, though I believe these out this year include this new word. As you can judge by its formation, it has something to do with life.

And those you have it, it is the living element of a food. Scientists cannot separate a food and say, "Here are the vitamins, under this microscope." But they know that these elements exist, even if they are not to be seen. Foods without them or foods deprived of them, will not sustain life. But here, rickets and graduate, if your dress is white; and comb your hair so it will fluff all around the face, especially over the ears.

H. L.—A girl 16, five feet, seven and a half inches tall should weigh 125 pounds.

H. L.—A girl of five feet, seven and a half inches, should weigh about 110 or more. You are tall for your age. Probably older styles become you—I think a suit would look well on you. Brown orfords would look very well with tailored suit, and as you are dark, brown would be a good shade to choose for this.

Anxious—A girl 14, five feet two, should weigh 115 pounds. Try next for the pimple, and continue dieting.

Questions and Answers.
Edna C.—If you are five feet four in your stocking feet, and are if, you should weigh around 110. You can see you are much under weight. You should try and build up. Wear white slippers when you

Judge Gives Wild Cat to Husband in Divorce Suit

San Francisco, Calif., May 8.—Judge R. P. Sherrill became the arbiter of the destiny of a "wild cat" in the course of his duties in the divorce court here.

After granting a divorce to Mrs. Blanche B. Brien from John A. Brien the question arose as to the custody of the Brien family cat.

Mr. Brien testified that it was a "wild cat" and could be managed only by his mother. The judge decided that inasmuch as the cat had been married only a short time Mrs. Brien had not had time to become attached to the cat, so awarded it to the husband.

Neighbors' "Jury of 3" Hears Separation Case

Syracuse, N. Y., May 8.—A unique separation of husband and wife took place at Liverpool, a suburb of this city, when by the mutual consent of the couple a "jury of three" decided that the use of Mrs. W. W. Brunk would be "better off apart."

The pastor and Mrs. Brunk testified before the jury following which a daughter, Miss Lillian, a sophomore at Syracuse university, was called and stated that her parents were unable to "agree on many things."

The jury, composed of three neighbors, then deliberated, finally rendering a decision that, for the present at least, the couple should separate. The next day the couple signed an agreement upon the terms of their separation.
